OCTOBER 2009

Robinson & Bagley Join the Justice League

A new Justice League roster would be big news on its own. But in this case, it's only half of the story—the other half is a new creative team that brings together two star creators to return Justice League of America to its former glory. Beginning later this month, Superman and Justice League: Cry for Justice writer James Robinson joins forces with Ultimate Spider-Man and Trinity illustrator Mark Bagley to take Justice League of America in a bold new direction. complete with surprising new team members and guest-stars galore.

Robinson's involvement with Justice League of America began with his work on a very different Justice League project, the Cry for Justice miniseries. "Cry for Justice was going to be a finite series," Robinson said. "Then, as ideas came up for events in the DCU, Cry for Justice was tailored to fit those events. At the same time, out of nowhere came the need for a new writer on the Justice League, and Eddie [Berganza, editor of Justice League of America] asked me to come on board to take over the main book. As the events unfolded, the end of Cry for Justice became a focal moment for the JLA; it was a great time to come on board Justice League.

"Initially, dealing with the Blackest Night stuff, but after that I'm taking things into a new direction with some members of the Cry for Justice team as well as the members already there, along with some new members that I'm going to be introducing."

Artist Mark Bagley was wrapping up his run on Trinity (which featured not only every member of the JLA but pretty much every superhero in the DCU!) and was looking for his next major project when Justice League of America came up. "It was a process of finding something that suited my skills," Bagley said. "Dan DiDio was pretty clear that my opportunities after Trinity were wide open. We talked about a few projects, but when JLA was mentioned, I knew that was the book. It sounded like it would be fun, and it was going to be high profile. I've always enjoyed working on team books, and DC seemed thrilled to have someone on this title who can do a quality monthly job. Then, when they told me that James was on board, I was sold."

Justice League of America #38 presents a team in transition, paving the way for a Blackest Night two-parter in JLA #s 39 & 40. Then, in January's Justice League #41, Robinson and Bagley debut their new team— a team that will include some veteran members, some surprising replacements, and some former members of other high-profile super-teams.

Which team members from Cry for Justice (which wraps up at about the same time that JLA #41 debuts) will be a part of the Justice League? "We'll see Ray Palmer make a move to the new team," Robinson said. "Hal Jordan will be a part of the Justice League, of course. Oliver Queen will be in it. While Superman is off Earth, he obviously won't be in the team, but it would be ridiculous for Superman not to be a part of the team when he returns to Earth. And of course, Congorilla will be a part of the team."

Notice that Robinson said Congorilla, not Congo Bill. As readers of Cry for Justice know, "Congo Bill's body is dead; he is now stuck in the gorilla's body."

ANYWAY, I CALLED YOU HERE TO SAY IF THERE'S EVER A TEAM LEFT...
LOOK AROUND AT THE JLA'S PARTY— DOES IT APPEAR YOU TO HAVE YET ANOTHER TO FILL IN THE PATTERN?
OR DOES IT SAY "HELL, ARROW BE NO GOOD. LET'S CALL IT A DAY"?
KNEW YOU HAVE YOUR KIDS THIS MUST GET INTO YOUR TIME WITH THEM.
AWW— THERE'S MY BOOM TOO!
AND KEIRY, YOU CERTAINLY HAVE A LIFE OUTSIDE OF THIS. A WIFE AND DAUGHTER.
A LIFE? I DON'T KNOW THE WORD.
NO PLAN, YOU MEAN—
—A DOCTOR, PROMETHEUS.
AND IF I LEARN THAT MY TIME IS SIMPLY UP... THEN I NEED TO SEE MY SON AND HIS MOM.
SO MUCH TO SAY.
EASY FOR YOU TO TALK ABOUT OH, HAL, WHAT ABOUT POINT DO YOU HAVE PLANS THAT DON'T INVOLVE BEING IN THE AIR?
FUNNY YOU SHOULD ASK. I SPOKE TO BILL— CONGORILLA. I MEAN— NOW I'M THINKING ABOUT—
KRAVAAKSH

Robinson explained what Congorilla brings to the team. "Congo Bill has been around for a long time; he's about a hundred years old. He was about 35 years old in the Golden Age, so he may be closer to 110. I like the idea that he's the oldest and in many ways the wisest member of the team. He doesn't resent being trapped in the gorilla body; he feels that he's blessed with more time because he's in that body. The time he's spent among the apes has given him an inner tranquility and a peace; choosing to walk among men again, he'll bring a sort of asset to the team. And his human body won't be coming back as a part of Blackest Night; it's dead, and he's moving on from there. The plans for him, in my mind, were set before Blackest Night, and those plans haven't changed."

Three veteran heroes won't be a part of the Justice League initially, but their place will be filled by three capable and familiar stand-ins: Dick Grayson's Batman in place of Bruce Wayne's Dark Knight, Mon-El in place of Superman, and Donna Troy in place of Wonder Woman.

As far as other members of the Justice League—well, it looks like the JV team is moving up to varsity. "You're going to see three of the Titans become Justice League members and evolve into the adults that they should have been," Robinson said. "I'm excited about what I'm doing with Vic Stone; he's not even sure he should be a Justice League member at first, but he'll find his feet and become a crucial part of the team.

"I'm also pleased to be making Donna Troy more than Wonder Woman Lite; she's going to b a kick-ass character who'll be a crucial part of the team as well. And I'm intrigued with the potential for a little romantic tension between Starfire and the Dick Grayson Batman; that should be a lot of fun.

"Of course, Dick Grayson will be constantly torn between his time in Gotham and his time with the team. But he's stepping in with much more experience; he has more experience as a leader, as a detective, and as a surrogate Batman. There wil be aspects to being in a team with his peers and with more veteran heroes that will present him with interesting changes."

Robinson pointed out one other change that comes about as a result of Dick Grayson's involvement in the team. "You will see that, for first time in a Justice League book, Batman and Green Lantern both get along! Dick Grayson likes Hal, while Bruce Wayne didn't care for him as much."

Bagley is already quite familiar with Dick Grayson as Batman; after all, he's the artist who helped establish the look and feel of Grayson's Batman in his four-issue arc in Batman #s 688-691. "After four issues of Batman, drawing Dick Grayson as Batman is easy," Bagley said. "He's thinner and more acrobatic than Bruce, and I try to communicate that in the way he carries himself."

The new Batman isn't the only character with a different look. "Mon-El is younger and smaller than Superman, and Donna Troy is much younger and more slender than Wonder Woman," Bagley said. "I'll approach each them with those qualities in mind. I've always tried to draw different characters with distinctive and suitable body types."

Just as Bagley is giving the next generation of DC's trinity a different look, so is Robinson giving each a distinctive personality to differentiate him/her from his/her predecessors. "As you'll see in the upcoming five-part 'Man of Valor' that leads into Superman #700, his personality and his costume is going to change. I'm going to enjoy putting him the role as Superman's replacement. There's a reason why he takes on that symbol, and it's explained in the pages of Superman.

"I really wanted to explore the changes that Mon-El has undergone," Robinson continued. "When he first arrives in 20th Century, he's insecure teenager, and then he almost immediately goes into the Phantom Zone. When he comes out in the 30th Century, he's a fully-formed first-class superhero. So I wondered how he got that experience. This is that period of time. Within the last arc of 'Man of Valor,' he changes in almost every way, becoming more of the person he's destined to be. This will reflect in the pages of Justice League as well.

"But Mon-El knows that he isn't Superman. While you know that you can always look to Superman to contribute to the solution for any problem, Mon-El knows that he isn't that guy."

Robinson isn't ignoring the current JLA members who will continue as a part of the team. "I'm going to try to bring out a little more of Doctor Light's personality. She's really the sort of holdout from the old team until Plastic Man comes back or Firestorm returns. Everyone has reasons to go off and do things, but that will eventually fold back into the Justice League. I'm not just throwing these characters away; you'll see them all again, including Gypsy, who's in the Blackest Night crossover and will be back again. I have a bigger picture in mind; I like Plastic Man, I like Vixen."

Readers can also look forward to some interesting guest stars. "The book will have a lot of other characters coming in and going out," Robinson said. "In Justice League #41, there will be a surprise appearance by Darwin Jones [a famed investigator of the unusual who has been a part of the DC Universe for more than half a century, since he debuted in Strange Adventures #1]. If the team needs a doctor, they'll go to Doctor Mid-Nite. If Cyborg needs advice on robotics, he'll go to Will Magnus. If they need advice on the subterranean world, they'll go to Cave Carson."

Why not start off with the new team in Justice League #38, the first Robinson/Bagley issue? "I came on board with the Blackest Night tie-in already planned," Robinson said, and he had to make sure that the already-established Justice League was present in that two-parter. "But then, with #41, we'll see some leave, some stay, and then we'll really kick in with the new team. It gives me time to build to the point I want to get to, but these aren't throwaway stories by any mean. This all ties in to the big picture, and even with #38 we get to set something things in motion.

"If you're going to do a JLA book and make it the focal point so that all roads lead to it, then it has to reference what's going on in the DCU. With that in mind, I have chosen a point of time after Cry for Justice and before Justice League #41 to fit in our Blackest Night story. The end of #38 goes right into the Blackest Night two-parter—it basically picks up right afterwards. I liken it to what happened in Secret Wars, where they went away, and when they came back the Hulk had broken his leg and the Thing was missing and there was the symbiote black costume and you're like, "What happened?" Then you had twelve issues where you where shown what happened.

"So in Justice League of America #38, you see that Vixen has taken on Prometheus and is injured, Doctor Light has taken on Prometheus and is injured, and Plastic Man's brain has been a affected to the point that he can't control his body. He's been around for a long time, but he stays youthful because of his control of his elastic body. He basically suffers a Plastic Man version of dementia, and he can't maintain his youthful appearance."

"The idea is that Plastic Man has lost full control of his abilities, and is in a constant struggle to hold himself together," Bagley added. "Aside from the obvious 'melty drippiness' of this condition, I'm trying to draw him with a shiny plastic sheen, as if it's too difficult to maintain a human skin texture."

"It's a way to get him out of the team initially," Robinson continued, "but he won't be gone forever. I have to say that I'm a big fan of Joe Kelly's run and I love how he handled Plastic Man; I hope that I can live up to that when I bring him back—but for now he'll be out of the team."

Of course a first-class superteam needs first-class villains, and Robinson is working on that, too. "I've gotten some criticism for bringing back Despero again, but for that one issue I wanted to use one of the classic villains," Robinson said. "However, I think that our goal is to do something different. If people are moaning about using Despero too much, then maybe it's time for us to introduce some new villains for the JLA. I'd like to bring back some of the old villains and give them a little spark, but I'd also like to bring in new villains while giving them an element of familiarity. The challenge is coming up with a villain capable of taking on a team like this."

Although Robinson wants to do something different in terms of villains, he's not looking to ignore the past—in fact, there's one long-standing Justice League tradition that he would love to continue. "While it's not official, I'd say unofficially that I'd love to bring back the JLA/JSA team-up; if I have anything to do with it, it'll become an annual event. When I took on the assignment, Bill Willingham & Matt Sturges were just taking over Justice Society, but we've talked about it, and they're very open to the idea. Not only would I love to do this as an annual event, but I'd also like to do an annual crossover with REBELS. I admire what Tony Bedard's doing there at the moment. This is all speculative, of course—but I'd love for it to happen!"

While readers have another week to wait for the first Robinson-Bagley issue, the duo have been working together for a few months now, and they're both very happy with the partnership. "The collaboration with Mark has been excellent," Robinson said. "Sometimes he's drawing faster than I can write, and I'm having to get used to that! He's so fast and so good that we can tell larger stories without falling behind schedule. The Blackest Night issues, Justice League #s 39 & 40, will be forty pages each with thirty pages of story, and he's keeping up with me—in fact, sometimes he's finished with pages before I can get the next script pages to him!"

"James and I are enthused to be working together, and we talk a couple of times a week—of course, I can't understand a word he says because of his British accent, but I'm trying," Bagley joked. "Seriously, it's always great to work with a guy who's so talented and story-driven."

The extra-length Blackest Night tie-in issues have been so popular within the DC offices that editorial is tapping Robinson and Bagley to do something virtually unprecedented in the DCU. "DC has agreed to let us make Justice League a forty page comic with thirty pages of story in each issue for the foreseeable future," Robinson said. "Mark can do about a book and a half each month, and he's been looking for something to do for those extra pages; now he doesn't have to look elsewhere. This means that all he has to do now is concentrate on Justice League.

"Our hope is that if we can get ahead, he can actually do the Justice League Annual as well, so that we can keep the whole team on every Justice League. It'll be like the early days of Marvel, when Stan and Jack not only did every issue of Fantastic Four but did the FF Annual as well, and Stan and Steve did every issue of Amazing Spider-Man and did the Spidey Annual, too. Mark's one of the few artists in the field today who can do that!"

Justice League of America #38, the premiere issue by James Robinson and Mark Bagley, is slated for October 21st release.

The following comics and comics-related books are tentatively slated for release on the dates given, based on the latest information provided by the publishers at press-time; if no date is listed, the books are tentatively scheduled for release sometime in the month of November.
